

The purpose of this CareNet study is to learn about the experiences of diverse family caregivers of older adults with memory problems, like dementia. Because it is common that more than one caregiver are involved in helping out those older adults with memory problems, we are particularly interested in learning about how those multiple caregivers manage and coordinate caregiving activities among them. Ultimately, our goal is to develop strategies to reduce burden and stress among caregivers of older adults with memory problems.

The study requires a one-time interview that should take about 60 minutes total. The interview includes questions about your point of view and experience of caregiving for your loved one, such as what that involves day to day, what it means or what it is like to be a caregiver of your loved one, and who else shares caregiving with you and how the caregiving responsibilities are divided, for example.

You will receive a $50 gift card after completing the interview for your time and effort.

To be eligible for the study, you must be a caregiver of an older adult with Alzheimer's disease or other type of dementia. If you are interested in this study, we will send you an online pre-screening survey link to determine if you are qualified for the study.
